

Cuba backing U.S. leftists, radicals for decades

Report details campaign of subversion with agents inside American government

Cuba's communist regime has been engaged in a long-term campaign of subversion in the United States through espionage and support for radicals and leftists, including black-clad Antifa street thugs and the organizers of riots in the wake of the death of George Floyd, according to a State Department report.

"For nearly seven decades, the Cuban regime has waged a sustained campaign of subversion against the United States," the 100-page report states.

Cuban intelligence "infiltrated the highest reaches of the U.S. government, recruited and cultivated generations of American activists, backed an unprecedented wave of left-wing terrorism on American soil, and carried out one of the most durable and damaging foreign intelligence penetrations in American history," the report states.

According to the report, which is based on secret intelligence and open sources of information, Cuban operatives today are inside hundreds of front groups, activist organizations, solidarity centers and ideological non-government and nonprofit networks.

"These groups collectively represent one of the single largest, most sophisticated and dangerous vectors for hostile foreign influence in modern American history," the report said.

The report said Cuban intelligence continues to have "scores of still-unidentified agents" inside the U.S. government.

The report, titled "Cuba: The Capital of 21st Century Communism," takes a deep dive into how the communist country has run a decades-long subversion campaign against the U.S., tying the Cuban government to a wide range of American left-wing groups and historical figures.

Cuba has been supporting and influencing many of the most significant upheavals in recent U.S. political history. They include the George Floyd riots in 2020, the frequent violence by Antifa street thugs and the "explosion of pro-terrorist activism on American college campuses," the report said.

"The danger of this intelligence penetration is only compounded by Cuba's new alliances, as the island hosts a growing number of foreign military, intelligence and terrorist installations on its own soil — posing a unique threat to American homeland security,” the report said.

The anti-U.S. “assault” by Cuba is not about economic policy or sovereignty or ownership of territory. It is an attack on the United States “from within” that seeks to turn Americans into instruments of the nation’s demise, the report said.

Cuba’s “power was always ideological, subversive and parasitic” and has endured the collapse of its main sponsor, the Soviet Union.

The new report was published Monday and appears to be part of a Trump administration pressure campaign against the communist government in Havana.

The report is the first time in decades that the U.S. government has singled out the Cuban regime for its role in conducting large-scale overt and covert intelligence and influence operations targeting the United States.

The new study details how Cubans have waged “a long war of attrition” involving espionage, spy penetrations of U.S. organizations, the use of proxies and a “revolutionary infrastructure designed to turn America against itself.”
