

Global Warming: Fake News from the Start

President Donald Trump announced the U.S. withdrawal from the Paris Agreement on climate change because it is a bad deal for America. He could have made the decision simply because the science is false, but most of the public have been brainwashed into believing it is correct and wouldn't understand the reason.

Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau, and indeed the leaders of many western democracies, though thankfully not the U.S., support the Agreement and are completely unaware of the gross deficiencies in the science. If they did, they wouldn't be forcing a carbon dioxide (CO₂) tax, on their citizens.

Trudeau and other leaders show how little they know, or how little they assume the public know, by calling it a 'carbon tax.' But CO₂ is a gas, while carbon is a solid. By calling the gas carbon, Trudeau and others encourage people to think of it as something 'dirty', like graphite or soot, which really are carbon. Calling CO₂ by its proper name would help the public remember that it is actually an invisible, odorless gas essential to plant photosynthesis.

Canadian Environment Minister Catherine McKenna is arguably the most misinformed of the lot, saying in a recent interview, for example, that "Polluters should pay." She apparently does not know that CO₂ is not a pollutant.

And, like many of her political peers, McKenna dismisses credentialed PhD scientists who disagree with her government's approach, labelling them "deniers." She does not seem to understand that questioning scientific hypotheses, even scientific theories, is what all scientists should do. That is why the official motto of the Royal Society is "Nullius in verba," Latin for "Take nobody's word for it." Ironically, the Society rarely practices this approach when it comes to climate change.

Mistakes such as those made by McKenna are not surprising considering that the entire claim of anthropogenic global warming (AGW) was built on falsehoods and spread with fake news.

The plot to deceive the world about human-caused global warming gathered momentum following creation of the United Nations Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) in 1988 by the World Meteorological Organization and the United Nations Environment Program (UNEP). After spending five days at the U.N. with Maurice Strong, the first executive director of UNEP, Hamilton Spectator investigative reporter Elaine Dewar concluded the overarching objective of the IPCC was political. "Strong was using the U.N. as a platform to sell a global environment crisis and the global governance agenda," wrote Dewar.

The political agenda required 'credibility' to achieve the deception. It also required some fake news for momentum. Ideally, this would involve testimony from a scientist before a legislative committee.

U.S. Senator Timothy Wirth (D-CO) was fully committed to the political agenda and the deception as he explained in a 1993 comment, "We've got to ride the global warming issue. Even if the theory of global warming is wrong, we will be doing the right thing..."

In 1988 Wirth was in a position to jump start the climate alarm. He worked with colleagues on the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee to organize a June 23, 1988 hearing where Dr. James Hansen, then the head of the Goddard Institute for Space Studies (GISS), was to testify. Wirth explained in a 2007 interview with PBS Frontline:

"We knew there was this scientist at NASA, you know, who had really identified the human impact before anybody else had done so and was very certain about it. So, we called him up and asked him if he would testify."

Hansen did not disappoint. The New York Times reported on June 23, 1988:

"Today Dr. James E. Hansen of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration told a Congressional committee that it was 99 percent certain that the warming trend was not a natural variation but was caused by a buildup of carbon dioxide and other artificial gases in the atmosphere."

Specifically, Hansen told the committee,

"Global warming has reached a level such that we can ascribe with a high degree of confidence a cause and effect relationship between the greenhouse effect and observed warming...It is already happening now"

Hansen also testified:

"The greenhouse effect has been detected and it is changing our climate now...We already reached the point where the greenhouse effect is important."

Dr. John S. Theon, Hansen's former supervisor at NASA, wrote to the Senate Minority Office at the Environment and Public Works Committee on January 15, 2009. "Hansen was never muzzled even though he violated NASA's official agency position on climate forecasting (i.e., we did not know enough to forecast climate change or mankind's effect on it). Hansen thus embarrassed NASA by coming out with his claims of global warming in 1988 in his testimony before Congress."

Hansen never abandoned his single-minded, unsubstantiated claim that CO₂ from human activities caused dangerous global warming. He defied the Hatch Act that limits bureaucratic political actions, and, in 2011, was even arrested in a protest at the White House against the Keystone XL pipeline, at least his third such arrest to that point.

Wirth, who presided at the hearing, was pre-disposed to believe Hansen and told the committee:

"As I read it, the scientific evidence is compelling: the global climate is changing as the earth's atmosphere gets warmer. Now, the Congress must begin to consider how we are going to slow or halt that warming trend and how we are going to cope with the changes that may already be inevitable."

So, like Trudeau and other leaders duped by the climate scare, Wirth has either not read or not understood the science. In fact, an increasing number of climate scientists (including Dr. Ball) now conclude that there is no empirical evidence of human-caused global warming; there are only computer model speculations that humans are causing it and every forecast made using these models since 1990 has been wrong.

More than any other event, that single hearing before the Energy and Natural Resources Committee publicly initiated the climate scare, the biggest deception in history. It created an unholy alliance between a bureaucrat and a politician, that was bolstered by the U.N. and the popular press leading to the hoax being accepted in governments, industry boardrooms, schools, and churches across the world.

Trump must now end America's participation in the fake science and the fake news of man-made global warming. To do this, he must withdraw the U.S. from further involvement with all U.N. global warming programs, especially the IPCC as well as the agency that now directs it—the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change. Only then will the U.S. have a chance to fully develop its hydrocarbon resources to achieve the president's goal of global energy dominance.

Follow the money. The man-made climate change hoax has been perpetuated by grant seeking scientist and those invested in the expensive so called green technology. How rich does Al Gore need to be before man made climate change is debunked? You can trust Al Gore the self-crediting founder of the internet??? What I find most depressing is that some scientists manipulate data to support a desired conclusion and then tells the less knowledgeable a myth.

Actually, it's anthropogenic global warming, never use the "climate change" term because that is playing the Hegelian dialectic game, when there was no warming for 18 years they had to change the name to continue to sucker the rubes, global warming could be denied but climate change can't be because the climate is always changing and always has changed.

In the early 70s the same self-serving scientists (extremist environmental activists) were pushing that we were going into a new Ice Age fortunately people then were smart enough to see through this early attempt at a scam and to disregard it. Unfortunately, Al Gore came along as high-profile high priest of the religion of saving the planet.

Deep State Globalist stooge Barack Obama's "Paris Climate Agreement" that President Trump rescued us from, is part of UN Agenda 21 and UN Agenda 2030. That's the blueprint for a NWO World Government. The Climate change hoax, is in actuality a globalist scheme to redistribute America's wealth and power to the entire world..... Obama's Paris Climate Agreement would have established that Fascist Islamic Socialist World Government and it would have erased our borders, voided our laws, seized private property and shredded our Constitution. America's wealth was to be redistributed to the world under Obama's Paris Agreement I prefer a sovereign America that keeps it's money and freedoms. Under the Obama/Kerry Paris Accord, America was to almost shut down manufacturing to cut pollution levels while China and India could continue their manufacturing full steam ahead! Human Climate Change is a lie to force us into a World Government.

I forget, did this "social scientist" also claim the ozone hole was going to shortly end life on earth too?

Just understand a few more years of this global warming disaster would have crippled the whole of the Western world, as coal powered generating plants in the US and Europe were dismantled, in favor of wind, solar and natural gas, of which can't compete with the hundreds of coal-fired plants being built in China and India. As Obama famously stated, electricity rates by scarcity must by necessity skyrocket for Americans. This year will bust the global warming as it is easily witnessed that global cooling has commenced.
