

A Misguided Narrative

Do not be emotionally manipulated by political rhetoric. Don't call it hateful. Don't believe it makes them a bad Christian. Don't insult someone who or call them names. That doesn't change anything.

They laughed when Charlie Kirk was shot while unarmed and simply having a conversation.

They were silent when Laken Riley was beaten and killed by someone here illegally.

They ignored the brutal attack on Iryna Zerutka on a train while minding her own business.

They disregarded Jocelyn Nungary, who was only 12-year-old when she was raped and murdered by two illegals.

They have never raised their voice for 11-year-old Aiden Antonio Torres De Paz, Mollie Tibbits, Kayla Hamilton or Rachel Morin or many others.

We wish that Renee Good and Alex Pretti were still alive. Any loss of life is tragic, especially when it is preventable. But here's something that is being lost in the headlines. The narrative being sold to them isn't the full story.

Rene & Alex were not peaceful bystanders. They chose to insert themselves into dangerous, escalating situations with law enforcement.

They are not martyrs. They were misguided by a narrative that tells them confrontation is heroic.

What happened is being used to justify a broader political agenda, one that frames ICE and border enforcement as inherently evil and anyone who disagrees as uncaring or cruel.

Do not be lectured on Christianity by people who would never open their homes to criminal illegal aliens and yet demand open borders for our country.

Those same voices said nothing about immigration enforcement when it happened under previous administrations (ex.: 2.5MM deported under Obama – with no ICE protest).

Silence in the face of crime and then outrage when implementation occurs is moral inconsistency.

Supporting law enforcement doesn't make you heartless. Disagreeing with the narrative doesn't mean you have no compassion. You can practice empathy and still have boundaries.

We have opposing views? So what?

We can respect our differences, or you can hurl the insults but either way, I refuse the manipulation.

I flat out refuse.
