

With Expletive-Laced Flex, DSA Co-Chair Puts Dems On Notice

Wall Street Journal Commentary, By Damian Paletta, July 2, 2026

Good morning. “We told you bro, we f— warned you.” That was the broadside that Democratic Socialists of America co-chair Megan Romer leveled at Democrats on Wednesday. It came after a DSA candidate, Melat Kiros, upset a 15-term incumbent in a Colorado primary on Tue. night.

Romer’s section of the party is the only one that appears to be playing offense at the moment. And they are full-throttle. The rest of the Democrats appear to have no answer for how to counter them. The party is being pulled more to the left every day.

The DSA has found an opening because the Democratic Party is still casting for a message, a strategy, and a leader. And there’s a large swath of liberal voters who are looking for someone to push back more forcefully against Trump.

Many DSA candidates are pushing to increase U.S. support for Palestinians, raise taxes on the wealthy, and establish universal healthcare, among other things.

Trump in 2024 cleverly assembled a coalition that helped him win office, bringing Robert F. Kennedy Jr. followers into the MAGA tent. Democrats are now in a pickle. If they decide, “if you can’t beat ‘em, join ‘em” with the DSA, they could end up alienating scores of centrist and independent voters. But can they afford to keep losing?
